Modern AKIS Malta Coordination Body

What is AKIS

- Agriculture Knowledge and Innovation System
- AKIS is a Member State responsibility, but the European Commission provides coordination, governance, guidance, funding and monitoring.
- EU CAP Network is the primarily EU-level platform supporting AKIS implementation
- AKIS is the framework that connects farmers , researchers, advisors, policy makers and educators

Key Components

Knowledge Generation: Research institutions, universities, and private sector innovators develop new agricultural techniques, technologies, and solutions.

Knowledge Sharing: Information and best practices are disseminated through advisory services, extension agents, digital platforms, and farmer networks.

Adoption and Adaptation: Farmers and agribusinesses adopt, adapt, and integrate innovations into their practices, often providing feedback to researchers and developers.

Policy and Support: Government bodies and policy frameworks support the system by providing funding, regulation, and strategic direction.

Importance

- Addressing contemporary challenges in agriculture, such as climate change, food security, environmental sustainability and rural development;
- Facilitating effective collaboration and information flow, AKIS helps ensure that innovations reach those who need them most
- Supporting resilience, productivity and sustainability of agricultural practices.

Key Functions

Encouraging partnerships among diverse stakeholders, including farmers, researchers, private companies, NGOs and government institutions;

Leveraging digital tools, data platforms, and communication technologies to enhance information exchange and decision-making.

Promoting ongoing training, knowledge sharing and feedback loops for continual improvement;

Focusing on creating and expanding new ideas and tools that help farmers deal with today's agriculture challenges.
